Charles Comiskey couldn't see Indian George Johnson of the Reds for $7,000. New Johnson is Cincinnati's only reliable moundman. The daily Innings has worked almost as many innings as Cheney of the Cubs, who is supposed to be the iron man of the league.

The British polo players have made a big impression during their practice sessions, so much so that the odds, at one time 3 to 1 on the American team, have been shortened to 8 to 5. It is estimated that $1,000,000 will be at stake when the cup match is played.

Capron, the former University of Minnesota athlete, has gone to the Baltimore team for the Phillies. He is an outfielder and is a very fast man.

Some short while ago Tommy Leach, ex-Pirate and now a Cub, was picked for the minors. Leach is hitting the ball better than any fan on the team, and it would be a rich minor organization that could secure his services now.

On his showing to date, A. B. Jones of the Australian tennis team looks to be the brightest star in the ranks of the visitors. His teammates believe he will leave this country a great deal more famous than when he arrived.

Cravath, the slugger of the White Sox, who was turned loose by the Sox a few seasons ago because he was slow on his feet, is clouting 'em so far that he can take his time in getting down to bases.

Outfielder Wheat of the Brooklyn Dodgers is doing great work with the club for Bill Dahlen.

WOMAN'S NERVE NOT FITTEL FOR FLYING

Mrs. Maurice Hewitt.

Mrs. Maurice Hewitt, the wife of a noted British novelist, thinks aviation is not a science in which women ever can excel. She speaks with authority, for she is a woman, she has an aeroplane pilot's license and she manufactures machines.

"They have not the right kind of nerve," she explains, "the nerve that gives full knowledge of every finger with judgment in handling difficulties with cool daring."

Charles Sudduth.

All professional motorcycleists are daredevils, but one of the most daredevilish of the lot is Charlie Sudduth, who hails from the Rocky Mountains. While riding a motorcycle tandem with his cousin recently they were the victims of an accident which resulted in the cousin's death. This fatal accident did not cool Sudduth's motorcycleing ardor, and he may be seen almost any day now riding with death on the American Motordrome league circuit.

Manager Frank Chance of the Yankees, takes his turn on the coaching lines this season. When with the Cubs he was a bench manager strictly, allowing his athletes to do the coaching. The National League has a big lead over the American in number of high-class hitters to date, 27 being registered in the 300 division in the older circuit against 16 in the younger.

Coach Larry Sutton, of the Brooklyn Superbas, is on a still hunt for a good pitcher for the Dahlen crew. Larry is prepared to go as high as $10,000 and maybe a little more for a first-class twirler.

Al Shaw, Toronto's center fielder, and one of the best long distance hitters in the International League, sustained a broken ankle by colliding with First Baseman Schmidt of the Orioles, in a recent game at Toronto.

Chameleon Woman.
You may be sure a woman loves a man when she uses his expressions, tells his stories or imitates his manner. This gives a secret delight; for imitation is a kind of artless flattery, and mightily favors the principles of self-love.

BACK TO BUSINESS.

The Tacoma Commercial Club and Chamber of Commerce has sent out the following communication, addressed to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at Washington. The advice contained is so practical that it will be generally endorsed.

"The greatest immediate need of the Nation is for the public mind to be turned away from politics and back to business. For six months it has been known that material changes would be made in some of the tariff schedules. Long delayed action will serve no worthy end. Trade readjustments await definite action and a fixed tariff status. We respectfully urge that a campaign be undertaken by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to prevent repetition of the calamity of 1894, when seven months of senate debate on the Wilson tariff bill brought commercial paralysis upon the country. Then, as now, there was small public concern at the outset. But seven months of bitter partisan contention in the senate stirred the public to a state of frenzy. Hope collapsed utterly before adjournment came in August. Today the people are hopeful. All are willing to accept the action to congress in good faith and turn again to fields and market places. All of the good and powerful forces of the Nation will become active, and the forward movement will begin again when definite tariff status is established and congress adjourns. Influence of the four hundred chambers of commerce and trade organizations, carrying membership in the National Chamber, can, through appeal, prove to congress the urgent need for prompt action and early adjournment. Every day of delay adds to the danger. Every partisan speech and every partisan editorial tends to shatter public confidence and add to the growing wave of doubt and distrust. Let every good influence urge prompt action and adjournment to the end that the public mind may be turned away from politics and back to business."

There is nothing so demoralizing to business as uncertainty, and that is the condition with which we are confronted today. Many industries are vitally affected by the tariff—in fact the most of them are. They can not be expected to make many plans for the future until they know definitely what they will be obliged to meet in the way of tariff changes.

Every day that congress delays action on the tariff adds to the feeling of uncertainty, and the spirit of unrest is already in the air. Pressure for immediate action ought to be brought from every quarter, so that the business of the country may know where it is at and adjust itself accordingly. Mistakes can be corrected, but the mistake of delay will prove disastrous.

WHY NOT THE PARKS?

People who have visited New York City in the summer time have been interested to note that the parks of the city are generally used for playgrounds where thousands of children, day after day, find pleasure and recreation.

Battery park, down near the ferry houses at the lower end of the island, is a favorite playground for that part of the city, while Central park, up in the residence district, is thronged with children every day.

People who can afford the luxury of the famous old park for the sake of their children, and renting property is in great demand, at fancy prices. All large cities appropriate their parks to the entertainment of children, but with us the mere suggestion is considered a sacrilege.

What better use could be made of the Court House and Fourth Ward parks than to equip them and turn them over to the children for playgrounds, under proper supervision? These two parks with two others located in the First and Second wards would be ample, and there is certainly ground enough for both.

This suggestion will fall flat because people who live around the parks don't want to be annoyed with children. They have so long enjoyed riparian rights that a sense of ownership has developed. A mistaken notion, for the parks, like the streets, belong to the people, and the people are entitled to the use of them.

Next to the public parks, the school grounds are the most available, and there is no reason why they should not be equipped and generally used. The only trouble is that they are too small for many kinds of sport.

The largest school building on Staten Island stands on a five-acre lot. It is a popular baseball park, and is in constant use throughout the summer, as well as every Saturday.

There is no grass on the lawn and no "warning" signs, for the people have discovered that the welfare of child life is more important.

The boys and girls of Janesville are entitled to playgrounds and should have them.

URGE CAPITOL PARK ADD.

"The capitol building commission has sent a letter to legislators asking their approval of the Bowe bill extending the limits of the capitol park by condemning six residential and business blocks between the present park and Lake Monona. The letter says that proposals have the endorsement of Senator La Follette, Governor McGovern and others. It is proposed to bond the state by issuing twenty-year certificates of indebtedness, the interest upon which would be paid by renting the present buildings until the state saw fit to demolish them. It is not proposed to pay for any of the land until the state has finished paying for the construction of the new capitol.

This news item, which appeared in the Madison dispatches yesterday, reveals the joker contained in one of the amendments to the state constitution passed by popular vote last November. Rock county was the only county in the state to record a majority vote against it, due to the fact that the press of the country made a fight against the iniquitous measure.

The Bowe bill referred to is the natural outcome. If it carries it means that the taxpayers of the state will be called on to contribute from a million dollars to pay for condemned property for the purpose of beautifying the capitol park, and giving the squirrels a larger playground. Is it any wonder that state taxes are increasing by leaps and bounds?

The present legislation caps the climax for extravagance and incompetency. The question of whether the present session shall be continued all summer, or whether it shall adjourn in June to meet again next winter, is now being discussed. It is a game of politics pure and simple, with McGovern and La Follette contending for the mastery.

The state is plastered all over with reform laws, with plenty more in sight, but the reform most needed is a time limit on our law-makers. A sixty-day session would be ample for all kinds of antics.

Before the United Commercial Travelers arrive in Janesville next week the haphazard collection of half-burned timbers that are used as a guard rail on the Milwaukee street bridge should be replaced with good, sound material to prevent accidents, at least, if not for the looks of the thing.

An opportunity is offered for good men to take the examination for the positions of patrolmen in the coming examination to be held June 9th by the Fire and Police commission. To be a policeman a man must have more qualifications than being a wooden Indian.

A Texan advertises in a newspaper for a lost, strayed or stolen umbrella. The knowledge that there is an umbrella in Texas, as well as a man with such faith as this, comes as a positive shock.

Tomorrow Janesville's claims to consideration as a possible site for the state fair will be fully discussed by the citizens' committee that will journey to Madison to boost for this city.

A North Carolina man says he supports his wife and six children and saves money on a salary of $45 a month. But he doesn't tell what his wife has to say about it.

Andrew Carnegie says he would give all his millions to get back his youth. In which event he probably would proceed to give all his youth to get more millions.

The New York widow who says she can't provide for her five-year-old boy on $5,000 a year is probably trying to keep him attired in clean and untorn clothing.

Maybe President Wilson wishes us to believe Washington never saw so "numerous, industrious and insidious" a lobby because none such was ever needed before.

The United States may have to build a second isthmian canal, at that to accommodate American shipping without offending Europe.

Through Editor Newett, Marquette, Michigan, is getting more attention than many years of industrious ore shipping brought her.

Former Senator Bailey is mentioned for governor of Texas. If Texas elects him, Texas will deserve it.

A Missouri jury has placed the value of fifty cents on a kiss. Probably that's all a Missouri kiss is worth.

Evidently Senator Lorimer believes the plank he walked is long enough to enable him to walk back.

Mr. Edison says there will be no poverty one hundred years hence. Not for any of us at least.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

DO YOU KNOW YOURSELF?

A personal word to you, whoever you are. I want you to forget the whole world for a moment and just think of yourself.

Now, do not mistake this for an appeal to vanity. I want you to think of your very best self, a something within you perhaps as yet undiscovered.

Maybe you are a better being than you have thought. Why don't you give yourself a chance?

Physicians now tell us that but a small part of our energy is used, and psychologists assure us of the power of constructive and healthful thoughts upon our lives.

Perhaps you only know the surface of this mysterious being you call yourself. Bring forth some of the deeper levels of your energy. Make yourself what you aspire to become.

This is not new thought. This is common sense. It has been known for ages and has been practiced by the greatest men and women.

Whether used consciously or unconsciously, it has ever been the secret of success of those who have led the world's thought.

Get acquainted with yourself. This does not mean being introspective on the one hand or selfish on the other. Both of these are weaknesses. It means to live and work with your whole being—body, soul and spirit.

You cannot be somebody else, for imitation is also a weakness, but you can be the best and highest statement of yourself.

All the universe is pledged to help you if you live in harmony with its laws. All your own inherent powers are pledged to help you if you live in harmony with the laws of your own being.

There are three talismanic words that may help you find the way. They were used by Paul—"faith," "hope" and "love."

Faith is a mighty engine in the reconstruction of our own interior lives. Hope is the magnet that draws us onward. Love is the inspiration that makes us render service.

We work for that which we love. Perhaps it is our family. If so it is a joy to serve it. Perhaps it is our country, our calling. Maybe it is art, or fame, or wealth. If we love enough there is intense pleasure in working for the object. With a few high souls the actuating motive is love of humanity or of God. They find their heaven in serving these. They do great work because they call out their souls, their whole power.

Bring forth the best and greatest that is in you.

Curiosity on the Farm.
A little girl of the electric lighted places went to her grandfather's farm to spend the summer. She saw an unfamiliar animal on one of her strolls and ran to the house very much frightened. "I don't know if it was a snake or an owl," she said, "but it runned crooked and spit fire, and I guess it was a griffin."

SHE WAS NOT BLIND

By GRACE K. BOSTWICK.

Because he had loved her a long time, he hesitated about telling her. With the direct divination of a woman's intuition, she surmised the truth. He had been trailing all about the subject for several moments, waiting the necessary courage. She took the matter in hand calmly.

"Why don't you tell me, Day?" she asked quietly. He started and looked at her uncomfortably. She smiled.

"Is it sure, this time?" her voice was low and even. There was not the slightest suggestion of a scene in the atmosphere. He pulled himself together with a jerk.

"Meg," he said softly, "you're a wonder! How did you know?"

"How could I help knowing?" she asked. "I am not blind."

"But I thought—I have been just the same," he insisted.

"Your heart was not in it, that was all," she replied sadly.

"She is not like you," he said heartily in response to her questions. "She is little and pretty and needs someone to care for her."

Margaret started. Had it gone so far already? "I was not attracted toward her at all at first," he explained, "but she seemed so helpless and I got in the way of doing little things for her. She has the sweetest smile and she is—O, hang it all, Meg! don't make a fellow tell you such fool things!" he blurted out uneasily.

"You need tell me nothing unless you like, boy," she used the little name unconsciously. "You know you are not bound to me in the slightest way. When are you to be married?" He flushed hotly.

"She is very lonely and she is only waiting until I can see my way clear to—"

"Then you were waiting my consent?" Her tone was cold. "By all means, let it be at once. Delay no longer."

He looked at her compassionately. "I knew it was going to be hard on—"

She Stood Erect.

"you," he said remorsefully. "I am a brute, Meg. I hated to tell you worse than—"

"You are very considerate," it was not quite a sneer, though he winced at the tone.

"You will be—we must always be the best of friends, Meg," he half questioned. She smiled bitterly.

"Friends? Why, of course; we could not be less, could we?"

"And you will come to see her and visit us and be quite the same?" There was a note of anxiety in the man's voice that touched her.

"I can't promise," she said quietly, "for I am going away. I had meant to tell you before, but I, too, hated to hurt you." The sarcasm was lost on him.

"We have been such chums—such comrades!" his voice broke a trifle. "It is hard to say good-bye."

"Yes, it is hard," she assented gravely, but without spirit. There was a long pause.

"May I kiss you once more?" he asked haltingly. She looked at him long and searchingly.

"O, you men, you men!" she exclaimed with sudden passion, as she looked deep into his eyes with bitterness of soul. "You take all we have to give—all—and still—there was a sob in her throat—it's a little game to you, her voice was steady once more. 'A little game that you play to the end—and the end is whenever the fancy dies—that is all!' He started miserably to explain.

"No, you may not! Do you think I would have the caresses that belong to another? I am not that sort. You are free to go to her—it is all right! I can say no more. O, go, go, for mercy's sake, go!" She stood, drawn to her full height, superb, queenly in her womanly dignity. He hesitated yet for a moment, looking helplessly into her face that had lived in his consciousness for three short—yes and happy years—then he turned gently and left the room, closing the door behind him.

In Doubt.

"Is your daughter musical?"

"Well," replied Mr. Cumrox, "she seems so in conversation, but when she sings opinions differ."—Washington Evening Star.

Worth Cogitating.

ROBBING THE SOIL AND—

When a Farmer Robs His Soil, He is Called "Poor White Trash." No Real Farmer Will Do Such a Foolish Thing. But How About Robbing the Community?

(Copyrighted 1912, by Edgar Taylor Wirelock.)

The real farmer today is the man who increases, rather than diminishes, the fertility of his land. He selects and rotates his crops with that object in view. He reads the agricultural papers giving particular attention to reports on experiments made by other progressive farmers and by agricultural experiment stations.

Why does he do this?

Because he knows it is foolish to plant good seed in poor soil. He has respect for the seed. Also, it is his wish to make a profit on the investment in seed and labor, as well as in soil.

This is all very simple and understandable, is it not?

Then please explain why this very same farmer, who would be insulted if he were to be charged with neglecting to keep his soil up to the highest possible fertility, will deliberately rob his community.

He plants seed in the soil. Therefore he would keep it fertile—rich.

Keeps His Community Poor.

He is himself planted in the community, but he does his trading in a far-off big city, and thereby keeps, or tries to keep, his community poor, himself and family.

In one Wisconsin community, the center of which is a city of about 10,000 people, it is conservatively estimated that more than $350,000 is annually sent to catalogue and mail order houses to buy goods that could be purchased at home.

This estimate was made by securing figures from the postmaster, the express agent and the bankers who were in a position to know how much money is mailed each month to the big city retailers.

If this is not "robbing the community," what is it?

A Legal Right to Be Foolish.

But, it may be said, a man has a right to buy where he pleases. It is his money he is spending and he has a right to do as he wishes with it, particularly as he believes he can save money by doing so.

Sure! It is the glorious privilege of every free born American citizen to consult his own pleasure when spending his money. He can spend it or keep it or he may send it to foreign lands to feed and clothe the naked savages. No man can lawfully dispute that right.

Similarly, the soil robber has a right to crop his land year after year, without consideration for its future fertility. The land belongs to him and he can do as he wishes with it. He is a free man, protected in his rights by a stack of laws as high as his barn.

After he has made a barren waste of a farm that was once fruitful, he can sell out and move west, where there is said to be virgin soil that can be had cheap, as many of his kind have done in the past. That is his privilege, too.

The close parallel between the two cases should have a tendency to give the community robber pause. He should think the matter over seriously and see if he cannot figure out a method by which he can, by co-operating with other public spirited citizens, aid in increasing the wealth of the community, just as the wise farmer increases the richness and productivity of his soil.

SENATOR'S WIFE HAS HAD A ROMANTIC LIFE; FIRST MET HUSBAND IN ALASKA

Mrs. Key Pittman.

Mrs. Key Pittman, the wife of the junior senator from Nevada, has enjoyed a romantic life. A native of California, she visited Alaska in 1896, and there met Key Pittman, the man whom she afterward married. She traveled 2,500 miles over the icy Yukon in the middle of an arctic winter to consummate at Nome the vows that had been pledged at Dawson. In Alaska and elsewhere, Mrs. Pittman has not only been Senator Pittman's wife, but his boon companion as well.

Mrs. O. D. Brace, Jr., spent Saturday in Janesville, where she was perusing a government report on a wild-cat distillery in Tennessee. I'd a heap sight sooner 'pour' stretchin' down my throat than whisky made of wild cats. It must scratch awfully as it goes down.—Chicago Daily News.

Miss Anna Sommerfeld is home from Birmingham, where she spent the season as trimmer in a millinery store.

The Kind That Scratches.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed the old lady, looking up from the paper she was perusing, "there's an account of a government report on a wild-cat distillery in Tennessee. BROWN BOTTLE ARGUMENT ANSWERED

The question is frequently asked—"Why do brewers of Germany and England use only brown bottles?" THIS IS THE ANSWER—European bottle beers have not reached such a high degree of perfection as American high grade Bottle Beer. This is the United States industry. This is the reason European doctors and scientists come to this country to study this branch of brewing. American people demand absolute cleanliness, which is guaranteed to a certainty in using light bottles. The choicest American beers are thus put up, which is in harmony with the highest authorities on this subject.

Gratifying to the eye—satisfying to the taste

The lustre and sparkle in HIGH LIFE are signs of quality at a glance—fine material and extreme care in brewing make it so—always ripened in wood to full maturity. Cleanliness is the watchword. Connoisseurs pronounce HIGH LIFE to be "The finest tasting beer ever produced." So will you. Convince yourself—order a case today.

We use light bottles exclusively for this high grade beer—common beer comes in dark bottles.

On sale at leading Buffets, on Dining Cars and Steamship Lines.

LARSON TO DELIVER GRADUATION ADDRESS

Rural School Inspector Will Speak at Training School Commencement Exercises.

W. E. Larson, the state inspector of rural schools, spent a full day visiting the training school on Monday. Mr. Larson visited nearly all the classes and expressed himself as well pleased with the work which is being done. Mr. Larson spoke to the students on some essentials in the work of the teacher and his remarks were given with a practical value. This official visitor will give the commencement address on June 12, his subject being "The Country Teacher Serving the Country Community."

Prof. A. R. West of the high school gave the training school students a very interesting and helpful talk on Friday on the subject of "Beautifying Country School Grounds." Prof. West is somewhat of an authority in this matter, and while he was principal at Lake Mills he succeeded in doing much in the way of beautifying the grounds about the school buildings at that place. The suggestions given were greatly appreciated by the students, and it is hoped that practical good will be the result.

The last tests of the year are occurring this week and the final examinations begin on Thursday, June 5. A circular letter calling attention to the value of the school for those who intend to teach is being sent out to several young women in different parts of the state.

Miss Jacobson and the members of the library methods class are taking an inventory of text and reference books.

The students are expecting soon to listen to a talk on birds by an authority upon this subject.

Many of the country teachers are closing up their school work for the year this week. Most of the training school graduates have done good work and several will doubtless be re-engaged at increase of salary.

Seventeen young women will receive diplomas of graduation on June 12th. After that date the alumni association will number thirty-one people.

Superintendent O. D. Antsdal will present the diploma to the graduates and will give an address before the alumni association upon the subject of "The Teacher."

The tendency toward less display in the matter of commencement dresses is increasing and it is hoped the true simplicity will soon come to be the regular thing.

The principal will speak to a country audience on Friday in discussing the theme of "What is True Patriotism?"

The N. E. A. meets at Salt Lake City, July 7-13.

It seems quite likely that President Wilson will address the teachers of Wisconsin in Milwaukee at the state meeting in November. It is distinctly an honor to the profession to have a pedagogical in the chair of the position, the most responsible position in the world.

The state school journal has this item:

The senior girls of the Florence high school have voted to wear expensive gowns for the commencement exercises, consisting of a sailor suit, costing less than $3.25 each. Florence is in line with hundreds of other cities in Wisconsin, which are wisely adopting the same reform.

In round numbers there are now a million and a half volumes in the school libraries of Wisconsin.

It is worth much for a country teacher to leave everything in shipshape at the close of the year for the benefit of her successor, whether there be herself or some new teacher. An inventory should be made of all school property. This should be checked up in the fall. The books should be gone over carefully. Some could be repaired. The register needs careful attention. All reports should be made up with care. In Harvey's register fill in all the blanks. Assist the clerk as much as possible.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

NOAH WEBSTER.

By Howard L. Rahn.

NOAH WEBSTER.

SEVENTY years ago today Noah Webster laid down the pen that had never been sullied by a misspelled word.

He passed peacefully and untroubled, leaving behind him an untarnished name and a book which is consulted by stenographers oftener than any other work of intemperance.

M. R. Webster was born in West Hartford, Conn., in 1758.

A graduate of Yale college long before the campus was dotted with bulldog pipes and white flannel pants, he taught school, read law, ran a newspaper, and engaged in other mental pursuits.

In 1807, when he decided to enter the field of literature, with that object in view he began the publication of a fascinating serial story entitled Webster's Unabridged Dictionary.

It was a work with a thrilling plot and a story style which has never been successfully imitated by anybody except Henry James.

When Noah's book was first published it made a tremendous hit. It contained a large number of words which Noah invented himself and which never had occurred to anybody else.

Noah was one of the best spellers of his time, and he became famous for his popular, as it could be used to hold a door open or a substitute for a piano stool.

Many a girl has learned to play the reed organ by perching unasily on Noah's book, and paying at the peddle with both feet.

Noah was no relation to the celebrated long distance orator, Dan Webster, but if it hadn't been for Noah, Dan would never have been heard on the side of his own words.

He borrowed all of the long, hard words which he used in his orations from Noah's book, and whenever he wanted to use a Latin phrase he would take one from Noah's book.

He had a collection at the back of the book. This made it pretty soft for Dan, and so far as we know he never gave Noah any credit for it, but went around for several years in borrowed plumage, using some of Noah's best words without using quotation marks.

Next week is fair and bright, clear the air, though hot as southern Tophet; no storm in sight, but that's all right! Don't blame the goosebone prophet! He sees the squall! He'll aacur for winter rains, aacur for "that sign and fail," the prophet wails, "tomorrow" will be raining! Tomorrow brings no rain, by jings! Has the Drink Habit a Hold on You?

ARE YOU ONE OF ITS VICTIMS?

Possibly you think you can free yourself and stop drinking at any time, but soon you are helpless, daily the deadly habit tightens its grip upon you.

One long arm winds around you and drags you from the position you hold, perhaps one of trust and favor, and you find it difficult to secure another. Nowadays the man who drinks is not wanted for any position of trust.

And then another arm of this beastly monster imperils your home—the place you and your wife reared with your savings—driving your family into the street.

Still another long snaky arm reaches out to crush your wife and children all on account of your weakness for drink. Your wife suffers in silence, praying for the time to come when her husband will be free from the drink habit, for the time when he will come free from the odor of liquor. She waits and waits until she can bear it no longer, and then perhaps she leaves you, unable for her children's sake to live with a drunken, incompetent man. And as a result of your drinking your children lose all of their love and respect for their father.

Again the beast stretches out an arm and drags in what few shreds of MORAL RESPONSIBILITY that may be left you. The craving for drink knows no law and acknowledges no GOD. It fills our jails with criminals, our asylums with lunatics, and our poorhouses with paupers.

Daily the drink habit tightens its grip on the man who drinks until at last death brings merciful relief to his sufferings. Then, only do the tentacles relax and into a pauper's grave they drop the shrivelled, diseased, repulsive mask of a man who started out by taking an occasional drink just to be a GOOD FELLOW.

Instead of prayers for his memory, you hear only the curses of his associates, the sneers of the men who profited by his down-fall, and the sobs of the wife whose heart he had broken years before.

Do you say that drink can never get such a hold on you, for that is what the drunken trembling, shrinking wretch who is sent to the bull-pen for drunkenness said years ago; that is what the wife-murderer said before in alcoholic delirium he committed the crime that sent him to the gallows; that is what thousands of men like you have said and BEEN MISTAKEN.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

A COMMON MISTAKE.

THE OTHER day I heard a self-sufficient young man calmly announce that all this classical music which people make such a fuss about is stuff and nonsense. "Most people just pretend to like it," he said. "There is no real music to it."

Now, as I believe I have said in a previous talk, I have all respect in the world for anyone who will be honest about his preferences in such matters, even when they differ from those of the majority. I do the honest man who admits he prefers Conan Doyle to Shakespeare and "Row, row, row" to a selection from Wagner; but I don't like the man who insists that he is right in his preferences, and that all the cultured and educated people who think differently from him are fools.

And yet this is the attitude a great many people take in many matters. Now of course each of us must do his own thinking for himself, and make up his mind what he believes and what he likes, for himself, if his beliefs and preferences are to have any real weight and value. Nevertheless it behooves all of us to have due respect for any opinion which a large number of educated and cultured people hold. Even though we cannot share it, we ought to admit that there is probably some good in it or else they would not hold it.

Of course the world would never progress at all unless people thought for themselves and had the courage to question the established order, but there is a big difference between the attitude of intelligent inquiry and the attitude of ignorant contempt which the young man I quoted, and a great many people, young and old, assume.

Personally I must say I like the simpler melodies, like "Coming Through the Rye" than an aria from an opera. But I believe that this is simply because I haven't sufficient musical knowledge to appreciate the more wonderful music, and I take every opportunity to hear it in the hope that some day I may understand it as I should. It is not right to pretend to like anything or believe in anything just because other people like it or believe in it. But neither is it right to entirely ignore the opinion of any large class, especially when they are educated and intelligent people.

Spencer, himself one of the most independent thinkers of the world, says that when any idea of custom has persisted for centuries you can be sure there must be some good at the root of it, no matter how foolish it may appear. And so when any idea or custom is approved by millions, beware how you set yourself against it. There is one chance that you are right and the rest of the world wrong. There are about nine million, nine hundred and ninety-nine thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine chances that the shoe on the other foot.

their labors will be experience. They will have several romances.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

FROM women's eyes this doctrine is derived. They sparkle still the right Promethean fire. They are the books, the arts, the academies, the shows, contain and nourish all the world.

SAUCES FOR PUDDINGS.

Chocolate sauce served with rice is not a common way of serving the sauce, but it is enjoyed by many.

There is no sauce that seems quite so good with the plain cottage pudding, which is a simple cake baked in a thick layer and cut in squares to serve, as the lemon or vinegar sauce. Take a cupful of sugar and mix with it thoroughly, two tablespoonfuls of flour, add a cup of boiling water and two or three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, the amount depending upon its strength. Lemon juice and a bit of the rind is still nicer; cook until smooth, then add a tablespoonful of butter and a half teaspoon of grated nutmeg.

Maple sauce is a sweet sauce that many enjoy with the cottage pudding. It is made by using either the sugar or syrup. Pour the boiling hot syrup over the well beaten white of an egg, and when well beaten add a half cup of whipped cream.

Strawberry Sauce.—This is a delicious sauce to serve with angel food baked in a sheet and served as a pudding. Cream half a cup of butter and add gradually a cup of powdered sugar; when smooth add two-thirds of a cup of berries, one at a time, beating until all are added.

Any kind of fruit juice thickened with corn starch well cooked and then made rich by the addition of a little butter, makes a very desirable sauce for many puddings.

Caramel Sauce.—Put a cup of sugar into a frying pan, stir constantly until melted and a light brown in color, being careful not to let it get too brown, as it will taste scorched. Then add three-fourths of a cup of boiling hot water and a tablespoonful of butter and flour well mixed, cook four minutes.

Hard Sauce.—Beat until creamy a half cup of butter, add gradually a cup of powdered sugar, add the well beaten whites of two eggs and flavor with the juice of a lemon or with vanilla. Whipped cream (a half cup) will take the place of the eggs and make a richer sauce. Put in a cold place until needed.

Every Day Talks For Every Day People...

"No country, after all, produces any better crop than its inhabitants." We all know what the good book says about men not being able to gather grapes from thorns, nor figs from thistles; we know too that we can by mere neglect allow figs to degenerate until they are not fit to eat.

We need only be indifferent with any young thing in its growing period to give to the world a degenerate. Young stock, even pigs and chickens are given scientific care in this country. One of our children's future worth lies in the vitality they carry store up in the training they will receive before they arrive at the age when they must face the world for themselves. If we neglect our homes, if we fail to keep them clean, full of fresh air and sunshine, if we fail to furnish plenty of wholesome, well cooked food for our children we are helping to develop a nation of people of unstable nerves and low vitality. This means inefficiency in all the world implies, for low vitality is very good soil for criminal tendencies.

Those who have the task of running a home, it is our duty to see that fresh air and sunshine, and that our children know the value of these two powerful allies. A private physical culture class is another strong help in the raising of a family. Let Mother be certain! Apart from the benefit derived from it, the enjoyment alone is worth the effort. As soon as the "wee ones" are dressed in the morning put them on the back porch and have them practice their different little "stunts." They know many, because they are taught at school. You go out and join them, it will do you a world of good. Try this exercise—stand erect, raise your hands high above your head, then slowly bend and touch the floor without bending your knees. Sounds easy, try it. Do this twenty times every morning out on the back porch, breathing deeply all the while, and as far as you are concerned the work will be as easy as a piece of cake. You will ever thought housework was hard, or how you ever could be cross and unhappy to the children and the best husband in the world.

Widowhood in China. According to the laws of good society in China, young widows should not remarry. Widowhood is, therefore, held in highest esteem, and the older the widow grows the more agreeable her position becomes. Should she reach fifty years she may, by applying to the emperor, get a sum of money with which to buy a tablet, on which her virtues are inscribed. The tablet is then placed over the door at the principal entrance of her house.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I belong to a club of girls which is going to give a dance early in June. Each of us must ask a boy friend. How and when should I ask mine? (2)—How long before a party should invitations be sent out? (3)—How late should a party last when young people are between fifteen and twenty? (4)—I have a light hair of a peculiar golden shade, which I dress slightly over my face, gray-green eyes, slightly irregular nose, Cupid's bow mouth, pointed chin and peachy complexion. How can I improve? (5)—I belong to the same young people's society as a certain young man. My father is a sort of patron of the society. I know the young man's brother is gone, but have never been introduced to the first; there is no means of getting an introduction, as we are all supposed to know one another. Once when I was walking with my father we passed these two brothers and both spoke. I imagined, though, that the first spoke to me also. Should I speak when I see him again?

NELL AND K. T. (1)—About two weeks before the party tell the boy you wish to ask what such a party is to be given and that if he would like to be your invited guest you would be very glad to have him for your escort. (2)—About two weeks before. (3)—Ten o'clock is late enough. (4)—I should think you might be pretty, my dear. (5)—If you are all supposed to know each other, you should greet him when you see him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—Will you please tell me how to whiten my white plumes? I have washed them in gasoline and flour, but they look grimy. I wash them every week or so, but they don't seem to improve. (2)—If I dyed them, what would be a good color (on account of the griminess)? (3)—What is the latest styles in new shoes? (4)—What hat is collected off of? (5)—I like maple. (6)—The water in our cistern is black and dirty—how can it be cleaned? SNOOKUMS. (1)—Perhaps you have not washed them right. Make a thin batter of

Domestic Science DEPARTMENT

CONDUCTED BY Mrs. Alice Gitchell Kirk

Very few voices are so naturally band that they will not succumb to training, and the voice can be trained to be just as sweet and gentle as we please to make it.

A woman should speak in a low voice. She should never allow her voice to raise itself to a high pitch. Men do not like a shrill-voiced woman. She should not shout her orders to the servants. This shouting and raising of the voice spoils the tone, and quality to make them harsh. A pretty voice is a powerful attraction in a woman, and she who would add to her charm a wondrous fascination should cultivate a voice "ever soft, gentle and low."

Let the Sunshine In. Have you ever noticed that the only grapes that become perfectly ripe and sweet, that the only peaches that make on their beautiful red cheeks and offer that luscious sweetness are those that are on the outside, entirely uncovered by the leaves, and perfectly exposed to the sun? These are the grapes that grow on the best vines, the grapes of the sunshine ripen them and add to their flavor.

God's laws are the same in the animal world. It is just as true that the only girls with red cheeks and sweet breath, the only girls who become full of life and sweet, are those who baptize themselves fully in God's glorious sunshine. Don't you see a good many pale girls in your long hair, thin, thin, girls with a bloodless, half-baked sort of face, whose walk, whose voice and whose whole expression are devoid of spirit? They are not half ripe.

Let the Sunshine In. Have fewer awnings and darkened rooms, keep the air from fading rugs and carpets; never mind them, but let the sun have a fair chance. Live in the sunshine every chance you get and walk on the sunny side of the street and all will have better blood, better digestion and a better disposition. Never mind the freckles—just so you have good health.

There are always chronic grumblers; the kind who "growl at this and grumble at that; they growl at the sun and growl at the moon. Don't be a pessimist. I knew a little girl who asked her father the meaning of a pessimist. She afterward said to some one, "Don't be 'pessimistic.' While she had not remembered the right word, her own seemed quite to the point. Grumblers are 'pesky beings' and rarely in good health; nervous system all wrong, with discordant emotions. Grumbling certainly disturbs the digestion and gives the face a pinched, sour expression, and think how hard it is on the other members of the family who have to live with a grumbler.

Many a wife has been made an irritable, nervous and physical wreck by a grumbling husband; and many a good husband has drifted away from intimate home life by a fault-finding wife. The children live in an atmosphere of discontent and caring criticism, which spoils their disposition and takes away their cheerfulness and buoyancy of spirits, making them nervous, irritable, unbalanced and disagreeable.

There is nothing more valuable or ennobling than overcoming grumbling, petulance and bad temper. Go about your work good-naturedly. Let your soul shine out brightly; learn to smile; let warmth, cordiality and sympathy be in your hand-clasp. Do these things and you will promote harmony, health and happiness.

Cultivate Sweet Voices. Very few women realize what an effect a sweet voice has on a man. A woman may be very pretty to look upon, may be faultlessly dressed and attractive every way, and yet too often, directly she opens her mouth and speaks, the spell is broken and the charm is gone. And all this need never be so.

HER HANDS AND ARMS MADE MARVELOUSLY BEAUTIFUL IN A SINGLE NIGHT

FREE PRESCRIPTION DID IT

Camille de Verlac says: "Had anyone told me such wonderful results could be accomplished so quickly, I positively would not have believed it. My arms and hands were covered with tan and freckles; my neck was dark and discolored from the use of high collars. All these defects were obliterated by one application of a free prescription, which I am pleased to give to anyone. It's just as simple as it is effective. Go to any drug store and get a one-ounce bottle of Kaulx Compound. Pour the entire contents into a two-ounce bottle; add one-quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Prepare this prescription at your own home. Apply night and morning. It makes the skin soft and beautiful, no matter how rough and red it may be. One application will delight you. I have given this prescription to thousands of women and they are all just as enthusiastic as I am. Try it on your face, neck and shoulders, and you will be agreeably surprised. It is deliciously cool and soothing and is not affected by perspiration. It will not rub off." Advertisement.

Things Worth Knowing. To hurry the cooking process of anything cooked in a double boiler add salt to the water in the outer boiler.

Have ham, tongue, beef, etc., to get cold in the water in which they were boiled and they will be deliciously moist and sweet in flavor.

Linings for clothes baskets insure the clothes being kept clean. These linings are of unbleached muslin, just the shape of the basket, and tied into place with tapes.

To remove grease spots from carpet, sprinkle the grease spot thickly with cornstarch and cover with a newspaper. Leave for a day, then sweep it off.

The Table. Fruit Pudding—It pays to make sufficient fruit pudding at one time to serve for several dinners, dividing the batter between several smaller covered molds. Mix two cupfuls and a half of sifted flour, one teaspoonful of sifted baking soda, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, mace and salt, and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Cut fine six figs, one cupful of seeded raisins, one-quarter cupful of coarsely chopped nuts, meat. Flour all slightly. To the mixed flour add one cupful of molasses, one cupful of milk and a generous half-cupful of soft butter. Mix well mixed and add fruit and nuts, and two-thirds fill well-greased molds. Steam for from two to three hours, according to the size of the molds. (Serve with either hard or soft sauce.)

Fried Tomatoes—Cut large tomatoes into thick slices, dip them in egg well beaten with a seasoning of pepper, salt and sugar, and cover them with bread or cracker crumbs. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; cover the bottom of the pan with tomatoes, and fry for about ten minutes, turning so as to cook both sides. Serve on toast spread on a hot dish.

Date Loaf—Two pounds dates, two pounds nuts, one cup flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Sift together three times and add one cup granulated sugar and mix thoroughly. Beat whites of four eggs dry. Beat yolks light and mix into cake, then mix whites and one spoon of vanilla. Bake about one and a half hours in a paper lined pan.

Show Pudding—White part: One pint of water, one-half cup of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, a pinch of salt, one-half teaspoon of vanilla. Stir cornstarch and sugar until a little cold water, then add the rest of the water. Cook, when done and well beaten whites of three eggs and put into molds to cool. Yellow part: Cook together one pint of milk, one-half cup of sugar, and the yolks of three eggs. Beat yolks together until it boils. When done, remove from the stove and add a few drops of vanilla. When wanted pour this custard over the white part. This will serve six persons.

Orange Jelly—Mix together two tablespoonfuls of gelatin with a large cupful of orange juice, one orange peeled and sliced very thin, the juice of a lemon, two cupfuls of sugar and one pint of boiling water. Let it stand after mixing it well until it is cold. Then strain it and stir in the beaten whites of two eggs. The latter gives a pretty and frosty effect to the jelly.

"Gentlemen—In March, 1900, I was taken sick and my doctor pronounced my case Tuberculosis of the Glands. Medical treatment did not help me, and on my doctor's advice, I went to a hospital to be operated upon, but relief was only temporary. Just a few days later I was taken with cold sweats and fever. In April, 1901, I returned to the hospital, but the continued operations were not beneficial to me.

In the meantime, a friend of mine advised me to use Eckman's Alternative, saying it was good for Tuberculosis. The wounds in my neck were still open and in a frightful condition when I started to take it. After using two bottles, I found it was improving, having gained weight, could eat, and was able to sleep. I continued using it until I was well, which was in November. Before I took the medicine, I had three hemorrhages; since I have been taking it, I have not had any. In November, 1901, I started to work, and since that time I have not lost one day's work through sickness. I can highly recommend Eckman's Alternative to anyone who is suffering from Tuberculosis or Gland Trouble, providing they take it as directed. I will gladly correspond with any party desiring further information of what the medicine did for me."

CHAPTER XIII.

Wright had no means of knowing what it was Judge Gilbert had to propose to him, but he felt certain that it had some connection with his newspaper and with the campaign now ending in a lurid blaze of political pyrotechnics. Gloria Kerr was the last person he would have thought of meeting in Gilbert's office. He had promised himself that after the election, no matter whether it went his way or not, he would see her and make his excuses for not having had the time to be with her as he had wished. He would also begin to look about for a purchaser for the News. He hoped he would have no difficulty in getting Gloria to leave Belmont. Then for the new life with her where they could be ever together, one in heart and hope and happiness.

When Williams told Wright that Judge Gilbert was ready to see him, he opened the door and saw the lawyer advancing to meet him with extended hand. The adviser of Belmont corporations knew the value of a handshake and a cordial greeting. It made a visit to his office take on the air of a social affair.

"I'm so glad you came," he said to the editor, shaking hands heartily. "I came as soon as I could," Wright was not going to be outdone, and therefore used his most genial tone, although the shaking hands on his side was a perfunctory performance. He knew Judge Gilbert's real attitude, and understood cordially under the circumstances favored too much of the Greeks bearing gifts.

"Miss Kerr and I have just been speaking of you."

"What?" exclaimed Wright. Looking past the judge, for the first time he saw Gloria. At mention of her name the girl rose from her chair. She really thought she merely wanted to speak to him, once more look into his eyes, and then take her departure.

At eight of her, Wright stepped forward and said, "How do you do, Miss Kerr? It's a great pleasure to see you. I certainly did not expect to find you here."

They shook hands in rather a constrained manner, Gilbert watching them closely the while.

"Naturally not," she replied. "I came to see Judge Gilbert on a matter of business and am just leaving. Despite herself she could not help adding, 'My friends find me most of the time at Locust Lawn.'"

Something in her manner brought the lawyer at once into the conversation with a turning of the subject.

"I couldn't tell you very well over the phone what I wanted," he explained to Wright. "I'll be a little while before I can talk to you. I need a few minutes more to ascertain fully the wishes of my clients."

The conversation was so business-like that Gloria forced herself to say, "I must be going. Please don't let me keep you from your work."

But at this Gilbert held up his hand appealingly and begged, "Please don't go. I want you to do me a favor. Wait for Mrs. Hayes. Until I've finished this conference, won't you be so good as to act as hostess here and entertain Mr. Wright?"

"Really, Judge Gilbert, I—"

"I'm sure Mr. Wright wishes it," he interrupted her because he did not know what she might say, and he knew his remark would bring from the newspaper man a request that she remain.

"I wouldn't have Miss Wright make a martyr of herself," Wright said with quiet dignity, "but if she would be so kind—"

"Didn't I tell you," the judge said to the girl, "Not a word. You must take my place until I return. If you'll pardon me, I'll be with you again in just a few minutes."

There was no time for them to protest. He slipped into the office where Kendall and Kerr were closeted, and closed the door quietly after him.

The situation was not without its embarrassment. Taking into consideration everything which had happened in the last month, there was little wonder that each felt constrained. In addition to that, Gloria felt as if she had just been figuratively thrown at his head. To a high-spirited girl this in itself was mortifying. They sat without a word until the silence became painful. Wright was desperate. Here was the one woman in all the world, and he was afraid to open his mouth. At last he mustered sufficient courage to remark:

"Beautiful spring weather we're having."

This remark served only to progress ate the alloted. It seemed to him, from the length of time before she replied, that Gloria was mentally inspecting the records of the weather bureau for the last twenty years.

"Yes," she said, a word that did not appear so ponderous as to require all that time to bring it forth.

This did not prove conducive to further conversation. He felt that the weather had not been exhausted by her voluble reply, however, and used it again.

"They tell me it's liable to be bad for another month."

Again Gloria seemed to make a mental survey of all the weather records of the last twenty years. Wright had almost forgotten what he had said when she at last gave the conversation football a dainty kick by saying:

"Yes," She Said.

"Yes."

This time he was ready for her. His embarrassment was wearing off and he began again promptly:

"Don't the rains make the road pretty bad out your way?"

"My friends manage to get out to see me."

This was a chill rejoinder, and Wright felt he had lost several points in their game of indirection.

"Locust Lawn is quite a distance out," he ventured.

"Not far enough to discourage my friends."

This goaded him to an apology. He regretted that he was not making it easy for him, but he forgave her because he knew she did not understand.

"Because I've been so busy, please don't think that I'm discouraged."

"Why should I think of it at all?" she replied with spirit.

Her remark hurt him, both her words and her manner of speech. It tore away his reserve and made him burst forth in protest.

"That's not like you, Gloria. We've been such good friends."

"We have been good friends," she admitted promptly. "Is there any reason, Joe, why we should not be now?"

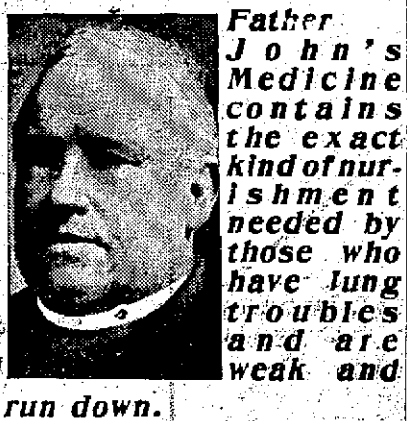

His heart beat high within him at her words. They were so direct, so honest, so like the one woman of his dreams. It grieved him that he could not be as direct with her; but that was impossible, for over them was the sinister shadow of David Kerr, her father, the boss of Belmont.

"There's no reason why we shouldn't be good friends, Gloria. What put that idea into your head?"

"My circle of friends in Belmont seems to have grown smaller and smaller."

"Please don't put me on the outside."

Makes Flesh and Strength

run down.

If you have any difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.

"You seem to have put yourself there."

The conversation lagged. There was so much to think about. Gloria was seeking to reconcile his explanations with her own observations. Looking at him closely she saw that he did not have that fresh, robust look which a month ago had made him seem fit for a gladiatorial contest. As he sat in the big office chair he seemed to relax with fatigue. His face was thinner, and there were little lines of worry about his eyes. Between his brows and on either side his mouth were to be seen creases which the girl thought proclaimed to the world his strength of character. A month ago she had not noticed them. She had felt he was such a man, but the wrinkles, confirming her belief, could almost be called a source of joy to her. They had made away with some of the youthfulness, but in his face she now saw something which more than compensated. It had greater strength now, strength such as was written on her father's countenance.

"You look tired." Her low, sympathetic tones and her solicitous look did what nothing else could do. They melted his stern purpose to bear it all in silence for yet a few days into a desire to take her as much as he dared into his confidence. With a woman's quick perception she would understand that he was unhappy. Her sympathy and her confidence in him would nerve him to fight the good fight as nothing else could. His heart was stirred by the possibility.

"Yes," he admitted, "I'm tired and sick at heart."

"Why don't you take a vacation? Go to Europe."

"I can't pick up and run away like that; but I'd do it anyway if it would bring back the dear old days."

"The days I knew?" the girl made bold to ask.

"The days you made so—delightful." "Can they be gone forever?"

"You mean—?" Wright did not dare to put his hope in words.

Carried farther than she had intended, Gloria beat a retreat by saying:

"Who knows? We may meet in Paris again some day."

"Some time soon, I hope. I'm sick and tired of it all here, Gloria. Today it has seemed like the game isn't worth the candle. What do you think?"

"I'm all in the dark, too," was her confession. "Slowly and surely in the shadow of her shattered hopes and his unhappy conflict of duty and desire were they being drawn closer together than even they had been when they laughed with the spring and dreamed of the days to come in a radiant sunshine of unwhispered love."

"I don't know what to think," Gloria went on in a low tone. "I don't seem to understand Belmont."

"Why don't you go away? Don't you want to?"

"What for? I know the life out there." She made a sweeping gesture which seemed to encompass all the world outside the four walls which shut them in together. "It wouldn't really satisfy me any more—to live as I used to live."

END LIVER TROUBLE WITHOUT CALOMEL

Untrustworthy Drug. Thought to Loosen the Teeth. Now Made Absolutely Unnecessary.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are the mildest but surest laxative known, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. Dr. Edwards has been calomel's uncompromising foe. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-oil-colored tablets—a rare combination of vegetable compounds mixed with olive oil. These pleasant harmless little tablets do all the good that calomel does but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel at all, but to let Olive Tablets take their place.

Most headaches, "biliousness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Olive Tablets when you feel "luggy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" the clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits.

At 10c and 25c a box. "Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own."

The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O.

PONPON'S STOLEN KISS

By ROB MCHEYNE.

The sloping vineyards along Ontario were lightly veiled in the mists of Indian summer. In the air was that languorous warmth that steals into the veins and lulls the brain to dreams, and reminiscence. The giant cataract could be heard faintly, a drowsy, distant hum of monotony—a sound that seemed to pervade everything and reach the bewildered brain; strangely associated with the heavy, odor of grapes, full ripe; the rich clusters hanging everywhere.

It is only by some such psychological analysis, whether scientific or not, that an explanation can be found for the startling fact that Fanchette, going home from the day's picking, allowed Ponpon the Jester, the clown, the great laughing roystering Ponpon, to imprint upon her pretty, upturned, scarlet lips, a kiss, thinking all the while it was Antoine.

And such a kiss! A group of gay young girls turned at the sound, only to see the demure Fanchette, blushing to be sure, but smiling in serene unconsciousness of the fact that it was Ponpon who had slipped up behind her and tipped her chin back, as Antoine sometimes did, when he was not too serious.

"So, that is the way when Antoine is not here!" And she turned back to wait for Antoine.

When he came up Ponpon was hanging over him, casting all manner of jibes at him.

"You have excellent taste, Antoine. I swear her little chin is as soft as ze breast of le perdriz." He burst into a loud guffaw. "Here is La Grignon"—he had given the dark-eyed girl this nickname because she was tall as a maypole, and it had stuck because she was pretty as one—"she will tell you, she saw Fanchette kiss me."

"Yes, and I think it is outrageous of her."

Ponpon was not prepared for this, as he had no idea anyone had seen him, and had called La Grignon into it only to tease Antoine. So he quickly ran off to join another group. But Antoine was silent and his companion had no chance to poison his mind against her rival.

Fanchette entered the vine-covered cottage and kissed her mother with the happiest of faces.

"Ah, my little Mignon, I see you have made up your quarrel of last night with Antoine."

"Yes, mamma, he slipped up behind me as I was walking home—O, mamma, it was so good of him. I know I was in the wrong last night and I shall tell him so when he comes to-night."

But Antoine did not come. The next day Fanchette noticed a difference in the way the girls treated her.

Day after day of the hazy Indian summer passed away and Fanchette, no longer in doubt of the world's injustice went about her work with a sad little heart. What had she done? Poor Fanchette! She knew nothing of the world as yet. She could not understand.

One day, late in October, she was sitting on the stone wall, her eyes off across the valley and her thoughts in far-off Gascony, when Ponpon came upon her.

"Poor Fanchette!" he said banteringly, "she is ze last of her illustrious race and it makes her to mourn. Come, let me kiss away that sad look."

"I hate you! I hate you! I hate everybody!" she burst forth.

"Fanchette! Dear little Fanchette. This is serious. Tell Ponpon."

Fanchette only shook her head and winked the tears back. For a long time the good hearted fellow who had worked all the mischief regarded her in silence, then, unwilling to leave without a word said:

"You will save Ponpon a dance to-night?"

The girl shook her head.

"Fanchette! Do not be so ill-tempered."

"I'm—I'm not going," sobbed poor Fanchette.

"Not going? Not going to the beeg party that the boss gives us. Why, there will be dances, and games, and jack-o-lanterns. Not going to the hal-lowe'en party? Fanchette! Fanchette! If you do not hold the water in your mouth you can never get married."

But the girl wouldn't smile and poor Ponpon went away sad of heart. "But she shall go," he said, and with the aid of Fanchette's mother he finally persuaded her to go at the last minute.

Of course her appearance, and with Ponpon, set the busy tongues wagging; and her tall rival hit upon a merry plan that all the girls applauded. They would send poor timid Fanchette into the great empty barn where where they had fixed up the big swing like a ghost swaying back and forth in the darkness, and when she screamed they would all have a good laugh.

The crowd gathered about the lower door, as the girl slowly mounted the ladder. As she removed the bandage and saw the grinning pumpkins and the great ghost she could not suppress a little gasp.

"Fanchette," exclaimed a voice.

"Antoine!" She ran toward the ghost and threw herself into Antoine's arms.

After they had sat swinging blissfully together for some minutes, Fanchette said, "Antoine, I was in the wrong when we quarreled; I forgive you for saying so."

It was easier to forgive than to ask forgiveness and much more satisfactory.

Kind of Bottle for Him.

An agent came into our sanctum yesterday trying to sell us a bottle that he claimed would keep anything we put into it for 72 hours, but it was a fraud, we could open it without a corkscrew even; the bottle that keeps anything in our neighborhood for 72 hours has got to be made outen armor plate an' closed with a time lock.—Alkali Eye.

A PURE MOMENT

Once Again.

Quite soon the world must hesitate and listen to the graduate, And soak in good advice That's given by the wise young men And women o're and o're again, Without the slightest price.

They've got a lot of it to give. They'll tell the whole world how to live.

And how to win the strife. They'll tell the old folks as of yore, In fancy and high-sounding lore, How to succeed in life.

It's safe to say they will solve all Of Wilson's problems great and small.

And question of the day: The world, of course, will be polite, And listen on commencement night, And then go on its way.

The Cubist Art

The other day we saw advertised

a cubist picture, entitled "Nude Descending Staircase." We were much interested in cubist art and sent for the picture.

It came yesterday and up to this moment we have not been able to find either the nude of the Staircase, What we received was a conglomeration which resembles a plate of chop suey being turned out onto a table.

There is no reason why this cubist picture could not be made to fit any subject as well as to fit the one which has fastened onto it. It might be labeled "Two Mermaids Flirting with a Submarine," "J. Hon Lewis at the Battle of Gettysburg," or "Ty Cobb Waiting for His Salary."

The picture was drawn by Marcel Duchamp, but he makes no explanation as to why it is scrambled. It seems to us as though a terrible crime has been committed. The nude lady who was descending the stairs was murdered, according to our theory, and the various portions of her anatomy were carted away and hidden before the picture was painted. That explains why the lady is not seen. Now as to the staircase, it is our theory that it was a part of an English country mansion and was blown up by the murderer to cover his crime. The cubist artist then came along and painted the picture. The effect is that of a string of box cars that have been muddled up in a rear-end collision. Maybe the lady was modest and ran away when she saw the artist coming. At any rate she isn't in the picture. Certainly the artist got there too late to get either the lady or the staircase into the picture.

Personally we prefer the picture post cards. They may not be so artistic, but they tell the truth.

From the Hickeyville Clarion.

Lem Higgins never traveled on a railroad train for fear of accidents, so he stayed at home and a chimney fell on him and landed him in the hospital.

A feller came along here and tried to git a movin' pitcher of the town marshal of Hickeyville, but the marshal didn't move for three days and the feller went away disgruntled. It looks as though there wouldn't be much farmin' done in our vicinity this summer. Nearly every feller is sech' around the general store waitin' for a letter from Washington appointin' him postmaster of our village.

Deacon Pringle has got o mewn which is the stubbornest critter in our township. When the deacon wants the mewn to stop he hollers "Giddap," and when he wants the mewn to start he hollers "Whoa," so the mewn does just what the deacon wants him to without knowin' it. The deacon uses same system on his wife.

TRUE heroism is not sectional or local; it is a national possession; an international asset. It doesn't involve success or failure; sometimes there's more heroism in losing than in winning.

There's not much that's heroic about the clothing business; it's a matter-of-fact, hum-drum sort of a proposition. But it is possible to do business in a spirit of service; to see that the man who pays his money for merchandise shall get all that it's possible to give, in value.

That's the way we are trying to do our business.

GIVE JAPS CITIZENSHIP AND THEY'LL FIGHT FOR U. S. A., SAY TOKIO ENVOYS

A. Hattori (left) and E. Ebara.

"If the Japanese are permitted to become citizens of the United States they will be as loyal as your native born. So loyal would they be that in case of a conflict between the United States and Japan your newly acquired citizens from the far east would be the first to fight for the country of their adoption."

So declares A. Hattori, head of the Japanese Nationalist party, who is now in this country to urge that the Japanese be given citizenship, and to study conditions here. He is accompanied by E. Ebara, head of the Constitutional party and president of the Japan Peace society, who is here on a similar mission. They will remain four months.
